

A Kindergarten class at the Rosa Parks School in Berkeley, California, was studying sunflowers and made these to coordinate with their lesson. The paper patterns used to make the sunflower cutouts are now up in their classroom windows.

The class is very excited that their project is going to Washington, DC for the One Planet—Ours !
Exhibit. They are also looking forward to installing these in their own schoolyard when they return in the fall. See the Photo Gallery for images from this project.

```
function startGallery1() { var myGallery = new gallery($('em_header_content_1'), { timed: true, delay: 10000, showCarousel: false, showInfopane: false, showArrows: true, useThumbGenerator: false }); } window.addEventListener('domready', startGallery1);
```

Sunflowers on Window. Photo © Sharon Danks

Sunflowers and Child. Photo © Sharon Danks

Sunflowers on Pavement. Photo © Sharon Danks

Sunflowers at School. Photo © Sharon Danks

Sunflower Cutouts on Windows. Photo © Sharon Danks

All photos © Sharon Danks.